Aid to the Injured on July Fourth

As Mrs. Rice, the suppression-of-un-necessary-noise advocate, has not succeeded in diverting American patriotism from expressing itself on the Fourth of July by means of explosives of various kinds, there is every reason to believe that the casualty list of our national holiday will line up in length with those of preceding years. Carelessness on the part of parents, disobedience on the part of young America and greed on the part of dealers are responsible for most of the accidents that the celebration of Independence day brings forth. If children were properly protected from the use of toy pistols, giant firecrackers and other dangerous noise-making devices—but why talk of things as they ought to be? It were better to accept them as they are and to give a few instructions to mothers who are apt to lose their heads when Johnnie or Molly is badly burned.

We all know that the best treatment for the Fourth of July accident is, to use a Hibernianism, to guard against it. But when the inevitable does happen and in case of serious injury the manner in which a sufferer is cared for during the wait for medical assistance may ward off life disfigurement or probably death. A calm, cool, self-possessed woman or man at such a time becomes an angel of mercy not only to the victim, but to his distracted family. In dealing with burns, both superficial and severe, it is well to bear in mind that immediate exclusion of air from the wounded surface will greatly relieve the sufferer. Should the injury consist merely of a reddening of the skin the best method is to sprinkle it thickly with bicarbonate of soda, then bandage it with a wet cloth till the burning sensation is allayed. As soon as relief is obtained the inflamed skin may be protected from the action of the air by painting it with the white of egg. The first layer of egg being dried, apply a second and a third.

When the burn is of a more serious nature and the cuticle has been blistered or destroyed, quickly give the wound a coating of vaseline or better still, one of olive oil. Disfiguring scars are often the result of such injuries, but skillful attention will do a great deal to prevent this possibility. Injuries from toy pistols that are such a joy to the small boy and a cause of anxiety to the mother are favorite mishaps of the day, and when the skin is broken from such an accident there is danger that powder may have entered the cut. The affected part should be cauterized as soon as possible. If one has a bottle of carbolic acid in the house this cauterizing is easily done by dipping a toothpick or match stick in the acid and applying the acid to the wound. When carbolic acid is not at hand call the nearest doctor or send the child to a drug store.

If there is powder in the eyes of the enthusiastic celebrants draw the upper lid well down over the lower and have the patient blow his nose forcibly at the same time. If the troublesome particle should get imbedded under the lower lid draw the lid down by the lashes and let the sufferer turn his eyeball toward the nose, then use a soft handkerchief to clear the eye. In wiping the eye always move toward the nose, as this is the direction taken by the natural secretions. Particles imbedded in the eyeball will have to be attended to by a surgeon, but great relief can be given by bandaging the eye before the physician arrives.

Shock very often follows a severe burn, and the sufferer, although not unconscious, lies in an apathetic state that is truly alarming. Failure to rally from this may indirectly cause death. To treat a patient suffering from shock lower the head and administer stimulants until the heart action is revived. Heat should be applied to the pit of the stomach and the extremities. Brandy and water is the best stimulant where there is nausea, or hot tea, coffee or beef tea may be used if the patient can retain it.

When the clothing takes fire presence of mind will often prevent very serious mishaps. Much the worst thing a person can do is to run shrieking for help, and this is exactly what very child does. It would be a wise precaution for mothers to give a little talk to their youngsters before the great day on first aids and impress upon them the importance of keeping their mouths shut if the clothes should become ignited for the greatest danger comes from inhaling the flames. They should be told to lie down and roll about them whatever heavy woolen object happens to be in reach. Even a woolen coat is better than nothing. When covering a person whose clothes are aflame be sure to begin at the head to guard against the flames reaching the mouth.
